

Life and Death (fan expansion)

INTRODUCTION

G'day Tragic here....

Welcome to my custom Print and Play expansion, Life and Death, designed for Mage Knight: The Board Game. This expansion introduces two new knights: a Forest Dryad representing Life Magic, and a Necromancer representing Death Magic. Each knight comes with their own unique Action Cards, Skills, Command Tokens, Reference Cards, and Player Turn Tokens.

This expansion is a free Print and Play project. It will always be free, I ask you do not try and offer me any kind compensation for the work done on it. I hope you like the new knights. Feel free to comment in the Release Thread, I would love to hear any thoughts you may have. Comments are the Blogger and Hobby Creator's crack. I toyed with the idea of making this is detailed instructional guide, but I felt it overly complicated it. All the rules you need are printed in the Reference Cards provided. If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me via BoardGameGeek in the file section for this project, or the release thread in the Variations Forum

Mevok the Boneshaper

As a hero of the Dark Crusaders, worships the Blood Goddess, Dark Tesla. He has delved deep into forbidden arcane arts with his ruinous experiments to find anti-life, the key to his eventual nullification and destruction of the Tesla Spirit and the disillusioned Elementalists who follow it. His quest for anti-life has led to the glorious art of necromancy: the ability to raise soulless automatons from the recently deceased. Devoid of free will, Mevok's hordes march, propelled by his own hideous resolve, across the land. Ever searching for the Forbidden Forest and the newly dead to feed the flesh pits and expand his ever-growing necrotic legion.

Mevok is a Necromancer and has a few additional rules to consider.

His entire gameplay revolves around the new game mechanisms for the reanimation of defeated enemies and using them like units during combat. He is also themed around Dark Magic and has a number of skills and abilities that utilise Black Mana, even during the day.

Mevok is essentially a Combo Deck. The combo, when it goes off is very, very strong, but it is hard to get everything into place for it to trigger at full strength. The design goal was for it to trigger once every 3 or 4 games. When the combo is not functioning, he is aimed at being a mid strength hero in relation to the official Knights.

The best way to ensure the triggering of the combo is to focus on Crystal Generation as the main priority for this character. Due to his heavy crystal generation he is a good Spell Caster. Artefact hunting will also greatly aid in both smoothing the combo trigger and during End Game Scoring.

Raising undead is a very unpopular act, and each time you resurrect any amount of units as undead, during a single combat, you will suffer a total of -3 reputation. This will lead to Mevok quickly hitting X Reputation on the Reputation Track. He does have a number of skills and cards that help him ignore the X space, allowing him to still interact with locals. Still, due to his almost guaranteed loss of the Reputation End Game Scoring tally, it is advisable to seek victory in other categories as your end game focus.

Duscenia Warden of the Verdant Sanctuary

Her rise among the Elementalists was assured as her connection to the flow of life between all living beings is so strong that her mere presence can heal the sick and bring growth to barren ground. As a sage she spends most of her time communing with the Tesla Spirit, but the taint of the necrotic legion has corrupted the very mechanisms of entropy and creation, forcing her to step out of the Forbidden Forest. Aglow with the light of creation itself, she moves to stand against Mevok's madness and bring balance to the natural forces that bind us all.

Duscenia is a much more traditional Mage Knight. She has no new rules mechanisms and should be easy to play with for anyone moderately experienced with Mage Knight. I would say that in general she is a more powerful Knight than Mevok and lands around the middle, power wise, when compared to the Official Knights.

Much of her skills and abilities revolve around the generation of mana tokens, but really her main theme is the utilisation of wounds. She should be able to absorb large amounts of damage and then be able to either heal those wounds, or use them. This can give her a good early ramp for she should be able to win many early combat situations other knights might feel would need more time to prepare. Once the other knights power up, she can feel weak, particularly if you have not invested in units.

Her lack of elemental blocks or attacks via skills means that she is reliant on Advanced Action cards and Units to gain those defence or offence abilities. So unit collection and the acquisition of cards that allow elemental blocks and attacks will go a long way to make her end game run smoother.
